

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An image forming device and method include a first storage storing a first function program, a system memory, a second storage storing a second function program, and a controller. When power or a reset signal is applied to the image forming device, the controller executes the first function program and executes the second function program after downloading the second function program to the system memory.